A challenge to dig but delicious to eat, razor clams are entwined with the state's commerce, identity, and history.

Join author and clam digger David Berger to explore the twists and turns of a quintessential Northwest activity, from its pre-settlement days to the present.

Discover the buried treasure known as the Pacific razor clam. Hunting and gathering these creatures has preoccupied Northwesterners from the time of the Native peoples to the present moment.

Learn about this bivalve mollusc that brings thousands of men, women, and children to Washington's sandy coastal beaches every year, braving weather and surf.

These programs are co-sponsored by Humanities Washington.

All Timberland library programs are free and open to the public.
